

IN FIGHTING HUMOR.

Now is the Time to Check Senate's Usurpation.

So Said Congressman Warner Regarding the Tariff Bill.

VOTE ONLY ONE WAY.

People Overwhelmingly on the House's Side He Says.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—[Special.]—"I never was in a better humor to make a fight in my life, and there never was a more glorious opportunity to make just the right kind of a fight to a finish," said John De Witt Warner in the course of a very energetic talk on the tariff agreement between the two houses. "Now is the time to check this increasing usurpation on the part of the senate and re-establish the constitutional rule that it rests with the house to originate revenue bills. I haven't a doubt that the people are with us in such a fight, not that the people care so much about the constitution, but here is a plain issue that every one of them can see. We are trying to do a thing which the people want done, and the senate stands in the way of it. If the people had accidentally voted one way or done it only once, there might be something in the plea that the senate should obstruct the popular will, but there never has been since the first government was established in this country, a more deliberate act than that of the people in electing this house and giving us our instructions. In 1860 the people voted overwhelmingly one way. They thought it over two years and did it again. There never was a campaign with less fuss and nonsense. In it than that of 1892, and if the people did not then vote their will deliberately they never did and never will. So now is the time to settle this question."

Adjournment Prospects.

"And what about adjournment?" "Oh, that is not to be thought of when we have an issue like this to meet. But I do not believe that there is a Democrat in that senate who will take the responsibility of defeating a Democratic tariff bill—no, not one. I am positive Mr. Hill would not vote against it now. His wife would defeat it. He has made his fight and recorded his protest, and the issue would give him just the opportunity he wants to make himself square. Of course you know that he has no more respect for that old tradition of unlimited time in the senate than you or I. When a senator has an opportunity like this for some young member of the senate to make his everlasting reputation! He ought to get up there every morning and make his motion for a closure rule and claim the right to speak on it as long as he wishes. That would be 'the courtesy of the senate,' you know. They would say that they had been here ever so many years and nothing of the sort had been done. The proper answer to that would be, 'You have been here so long that you have forgotten how to do business, and besides I am not living on your glory, but expect to have a reputation after you are dead.' But that's neither here nor there. The thing for this house to do is to take a firm stand and fight this battle out without yielding an inch. The people are with us, and those senators now it, and we should stay it."

Such was the feeling of most of the Democrats in the house when the disagreement was first reported and reserve was laid aside in speaking of individual senators, but the weather is hot, and this session has already lasted almost an even year, less the brief recesses, and even statesmen cannot long be held up to the high heroic standard. Messrs. Voorhes and Wilson, chairman of the committees in the two houses, both came out of the first contest sick, and though the rugged physique of the senator enables him to keep up better than the representative he is still far from well. It appears also that the house is quite captious about even the smallest senate addition to the appropriation bills, and at one time no less than eight bills of various kinds were in conference between the two houses. Nevertheless the desire to adjourn at least as early as Aug. 13 is having a great effect. Old members say that the house is tolerably patient till the 1st of August, and after that there is a wild and feverish anxiety to get home, but this year may be an exception by reason of the extraordinary condition as to nominations.

Foreign Affairs.

In the meantime interest in the trouble in Korea has suddenly become great on account of the action of Secretary Gresham, and there are faint symptoms of a revival of controversy about Hawaii. The alleged attempts of Australia and Canada to get an English hold on the island has stirred up the patriotism of the stalwarts. Routine business still goes forward rapidly in spite of the tariff racket. It is barely possible, after all, that Utah may not be the forty-fifth state, though the president has signed the bill, for the senate subcommittee has voted unanimously for the Arizona and New Mexico bills, and members say both will be pushed through. Owing to changes in all three of these bills, the three commonwealths will start even in the race—that is, they will elect members of their constitutional conventions next November, which conventions will meet next March, and the people will vote on the constitutions and at the same time elect legislature and state officials on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1895.

Labor Matters.

The curious way in which a new interest chills the ardor of action on an old one is shown by the slow progress of the investigations which were all the rage but a little while ago. Besides the numerous resolutions that were for complete arbitration, there were four complete bills providing for arbitration, which were sent to the labor subcommittee of the house. These bills were prepared by Mr. Springer of Illinois, Mr. Hudson of Kansas, Mr. Kiefer of Minnesota and Mr. Tawney of the same state. The last three containing provisions for compulsory arbitration in all cases where any equity of the United States could be maintained, as in the cases of roads in the hands of receivers appointed by federal courts. Senator George has elaborated a still more extensive plan for the settlement of labor troubles and proposes in addition a constitutional amendment restricting the hours of manual labor to 48 a week. The senator is not at all communicative of his views on the proper relations of the government to labor troubles, and it is taken for granted that he introduces these measures "by request," as it is otherwise extremely difficult to explain such action on the part of

BELIEVES THEM LOST. Carl Siewers Has No Doubt About the Fate of Wellman Party. LONDON, July 25.—Mr. Fielden, owner of the yacht Saida, which succeeded Prof. Oyster, biologist of the Wellman arctic expedition, left at Danes Island, writes referring to the report of the loss of the Wellman party and their steamer, that he has learned from Spitzbergen that the Rahevald-Jari, the vessel which was used to convey the expedition to the edge of the ice pack, was an old whaler which had been fitted up as a steamer and that she was in no way fitted to encounter the ice.

Mr. Fielden adds that he is led to believe that in the whole of Wellman's company there was no one possessed of practical experience in polar explorations. Mr. Siewers, who gave the information yesterday about Wellman, showed the Associated Press representative a bundle of letters received on Monday last from arctic sealers who had returned to Norway from the extreme northern waters. The writers said that they were convinced that all the members of the Wellman expedition lost, but that Captain Nansen's ship was also crushed in the ice.

Mr. Siewers believes that the Peary party will return in September after having sailed an open Polar sea. Peary's and Jackson's expeditions, Mr. Siewers declared were the only ones of all of those now out that were scientifically planned.
